Hats Off to the Return of Downton Abbey!

I wonder your halo doesn't grow heavy.
It must be like wearing a tiara around the clock.

The tart-tongued Countess Violet Crawley is an audience favorite character in Downton Abbey. And a halo is one of the few kinds of striking headgear that one does not see on the enduring hit mini-series from Britain.

So, when PBS Hawaii held a series of events to celebrate Downton Abbey's return to Masterpiece Classic this month with Season Five, many attendees showed up with a 1920s-style hat or headband. These headpieces sprouted fine feathers, jewels, fur, lace, chiffon and ribbon.

If a guest didn't have head decor and wanted it, one of our Downton Abbey partners, Hawaii-based fashion designer Anne Namba of Anne Namba Designs, offered an assortment of beautiful pieces. She and a top aide handcrafted all of them, putting the fun in a fundraiser for PBS Hawaii.

Viewers who've been drawn into the daily life and dramas of the great manor, upstairs and downstairs, welcomed the excuse to channel another era.

A member of PBS Hawaii's Board of Directors, Architects Hawaii President Bettina Mehnert, wore a beautiful black lace dress that her grandmother once wore in Germany, and topped the ensemble with a hat bearing grand peacock feathers.

Beta Beta Gamma sorority alumni who volunteered on our phone bank came in flapper dresses, long gowns and long gloves, pearls, beads and hats with veils.

In partnership with the elegant Hawaii Theatre and its new President, Ruth Bolan, along with Yelp Hawaii and its community manager, Emi Hart, we held an advance screening of the premiere episode of Season Five. Some of the male attendees got into the costuming act, too: suspenders, bowlers and a couple of top coats.

PBS Hawaii airs the first episode of Season Five of Downton Abbey at 8:00 pm, Sunday, January 4. We thank our broadcast sponsors: law firm Carlsmith Ball, First Insurance Company of Hawaii, American Savings Bank and Bali Steak and Seafood.

As you drink in the new plot developments and yes, more hat glamour, let's remember the Downton Abbey hat quote that is making its way into popular culture.

Say this, as Lady Mary did to her mother, and it's a way to end a conversation you don't want to have: "I'm going upstairs to take off my hat."

some of these old songs and old hula tunes, and breathe new life into it.”

Hannahs explains, “It’s still the same water. It could be a new incarnation of water, but if you break it down to a scientific makeup, it’s still H2O.”

When David Kamakahi joined the duo in 2011, Waipuna’s “progressive” style of Hawaiian music evolved. “I think that being able to not only rely on David for that extra vocal part — his instrumental ability is just fantastic,” Sproat says. “He’s one of the perfect complements that we could’ve ever asked for.”

On PBS Hawaii’s Na Mele, the men of Waipuna present their interpretation of Hawaiian music, accompanied by hula dancer Jaimie Kennedy. From “Malama Mau Hawaii,” a selection from Waipuna’s first album, to “E Mau Ke Aloha,” composed by David’s father, Dennis Kamakahi, Waipuna will take you through a joyful musical cycle, leaving you thirsty for more.

Na Mele: Waipuna

MONDAY, JANUARY 26 | 7:30 PM

When Matt Sproat and Kale Hannahs first started playing music together, they knew they had “something.” But they needed a name.

Sproat grew up on Kawaipuna Street in Hauula on Oahu’s Windward Coast. His grandfather told him the street name translated to “spring water.”

But it meant more than just that. Sproat recalls his grandfather’s explanation: “The way Hawaiians spoke, everything was poetic. Waipuna doesn’t just mean ‘spring water.’ In essence, it means a source of the spring where the water first exits the earth. That water that comes out of the earth went through a cycle. The wind drops the rain; the rain seeps through the earth and comes back to the earth as new water.”

Sproat says, “It kind of fit what we were doing,” Sproat says. “What we loved to do. . . was to take

Carlsmith Ball LLP

Last month, PBS Hawaii held a preview screening of the Downton Abbey Season 5 premiere at the Hawaii Theatre Center. The event attracted fans of all ages, many of whom dressed in 1920s attire. Attorneys and friends from Hawaii law firm Carlsmith Ball joined the celebration. The firm is a returning local broadcast sponsor of the award-winning Masterpiece drama.

“PBS Hawaii does so much to benefit our community through its diverse, educational and high-quality programming,” said Michael Purpura, a Carlsmith Ball partner. “The firm feels a responsibility to give back as well, and working with PBS Hawaii is a great fit.”

As a viewer and parent, Michael knows the unique mix of PBS Hawaii programs reaches the entire community. “I think Frontline is an exceptional program, but I also enjoy watching Sesame Street, WordGirl and Martha Speaks with my daughter,” Michael said. “Carlsmith Ball is proud to partner with PBS Hawaii and support programs that bring the community and families together.”

HIKI NŌ: Facing the Future

Thursday, January 15 at 7:30 PM

HIKI NŌ: Facing the Future, a half-hour documentary by award-winning filmmaker Stuart Yamane, examines a new phase in the evolution of the nation's first statewide student news network.

Those involved in the February 2011 launch of HIKI NŌ were pursuing a dream that was about to be realized. Four years later, the digital learning initiative has made a real impact on thousands of students and hundreds of teachers.

Now, a new dream has transpired: to develop HIKI NŌ as a sanctioned, official class within Hawaii's statewide school system, and into a curriculum available to public, private and charter schools. In its current form, HIKI NŌ is an extracurricular activity in most of the 90 participating schools. Thanks to funding from the Stupski Family Fund of the Hawaii Community Foundation, PBS Hawaii has the resources needed to realize this dream.

In this new documentary, teachers, students, curriculum developers, education evaluators, media professionals, and leaders from the Department of Education and PBS Hawaii share their vision for what this new curriculum will look like and how it will work – charting a course into a new education frontier.
