Getting to Know the Palace

LESLIE WILCOX President and CEO

- King David Kalakaua slept in a queen-sized bed.
- The King's bedroom doubled as his office, with staff reporting for work there.
- The King, a world traveler, took a page from Napoleon and crowned himself. (He picked up elegant his-and-hers crowns at a discount in Europe.)
- At formal dinners, the King did not sit at the head of the table. Instead, his larger royal dining chair was placed on a long side of the table, where he could interact with more people.

These are some of the nuggets our staff and college-student trainees picked up during a visit to Iolani Palace. We all went to the palace to learn its history and understand its protocol, as part of preparations for the unprecedented taping of a PBS Hawaii television musical special there. Our Na Mele program, as you'll see elsewhere in this magazine, celebrates the music composed by four alii siblings, including King Kalakaua.

Docent Maggie Keener ushered us into rooms where King Kalakaua and his successor, Queen Liliuokalani, lived and worked and gathered with friends and family and dignitaries. Aunty Maggie, a strikingly attractive kupuna, dearly loves the palace and is fiercely protective of it. She made sure we all wore booties over our footwear to prevent scuffing the rich wooden floors and she scolded anybody who ventured off the main path of the tour. And she brought history alive, conjuring up the daily life of Hawaiian rulers.

The royals looked out from age-darkened portraits in the grand entry hall. The hall centerpiece is a beautiful koa staircase, said to be the largest koa structure in the world.

In the dining room, Aunty Maggie asked us: "What was their favorite dessert?" We were stumped. "Chantilly cake?" "Red velvet cake?" "Kulolo?" came the hesitant responses.

No, she said – it was strawberries and ice cream.

We looked at each other. Back in those days, where'd they get the ice from which to make ice cream?

Our guide fully expected the surprise on our faces.

“They would order a huge chunk of ice from Alaska and bring it here on a ship, wrapped in burlap,” she explained. And then, the royals’ retainers worked furiously to make treats with the ice before it melted.

There was a hush as we entered the bedroom where Queen Liliuokalani was imprisoned, convicted of having knowledge of a royalist plot, after U.S. interests ended the Hawaiian monarchy. I recalled that in the Queen’s book, she described the bedroom as airy. It was. We also felt the weight of a painful past and the sadness that still resides there.

Before the day of taping Na Mele, PBS Hawaii staff and production students sat for a briefing outside Iolani Palace. The rows of benches made the students feel like they were on a roller coaster and they did “the wave.” Photo: Cheryl Sakai and staff, I’d like to thank Iolani Palace Executive Director Kippen de Alba Chu and his team for allowing us to bring people and cameras into the palace for the Na Mele taping. We operated, with all respect, under strict rules to cause no damage to the building or its priceless treasures. Not only did our crew wear booties, our tripods wore booties, among many protective measures. Robert Pennybacker, PBS Hawaii VP of Creative Services, oversaw the television production. Community Partner Hawaiian Airlines generously provided production funding.

We invite you to enjoy this special edition of Na Mele from Iolani Palace, at 7:30 pm Monday, June 11. You’ll see and hear top Hawaii musical artists performing the music of the four royal siblings known as Na Lani Eha, in the palace where some of the music was born.

Singers, musicians and our television team were profoundly moved by the extraordinary setting and the songs. I believe PBS Hawaii viewers will be moved as well.

A hui hou (until next time),

Leleiohoku – collectively known as Na Lani Eha (The Royal Four) – composed the beloved music featured in the special. “Music has always been an integral part of Hawaiian culture, and having the compositions of Na Lani Eha performed inside Iolani Palace by contemporary artists provides a continuum from the past to the present,” said palace executive director Kippen de Alba Chu.

Taped musical performances inside Iolani Palace are rare. Allowing PBS Hawaii to stage its production complemented the palace's mission to create a living restoration of the royal residence of the Hawaiian monarchy.

Working closely with the staff at Iolani Palace, PBS Hawaii's crew took painstaking care to ensure the production would not harm the palace and its artifacts. Like all palace visitors, musicians and crew wore booties over their shoes to preserve the floors and kept food and drink outside. Before entering the palace, station props and equipment were fumigated or wiped down for insects and foreign debris. In consideration of the effects of harsh lighting on antique fabric and paper, LED lights were used instead. And only gloved palace staff were authorized to move artifacts and furniture.

“We are all about preservation,” said Heather Diamond, palace curator. “We're trying to arrest any of the degeneration that normally happens over time due to humidity, insects, mold and all those things, so that the palace will be around for the next 300 years.”

Through the songs composed by the royal siblings, stories from Hawaii's monarchs also live on. “[They've left] such a legacy of music that's still performed all the time on the islands,” said guitarist Jeff Peterson.

Vocalist/ukulele player David Kamakahi likened the songs to journal entries about people the royal four observed, met or knew. “What was special about the Hawaiian monarchy was that they really wanted to stay connected to their people because they loved them so much,” he said.

For many of the musicians in this latest production, the once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to perform inside the palace was a tremendous honor. Robert Cazimero said he was humbled and awed as he looked up at King Kalakaua's portrait during his performance of “Kalakaua.”

“I would hope that every Hawaiian in the world would want to someday be in the presence of our king,” Robert Cazimero said. “To know that I had that opportunity, in a way, with his portrait right there in front of me, I’m kind of flying high right now.”

To Rev. Dennis Kamakahi, who grew up on and near the palace grounds, the experience was like a homecoming. “Coming back as a musician and singing the songs of Liliuokalani and Na Lani Eha, in the place where they would come to meet, you can feel the spirits. They’re there.”

Inside the beautifully restored Iolani Palace, these artists performed the music of the monarchs for PBS Hawaii’s high definition cameras:

- Marlene Sai
- Robert Cazimero
- Jeff Peterson
- Dennis and David Kamakahi
- Nina Kealiiwahamana
- Aaron Mahi
- Hawaii Youth Opera Chorus, directed by Nola Nahulu
- Kuuipo Kumukahi and the Hawaiian Music Hall of Fame Serenaders
- Haunani Apoliona
- Helene Woodward

The royal sounds of music included these compositions:

- Hawaii Pono
- Aloha Oe
- Kalakaua
- He Inoa no Kaiulani
- Tutu
- Queen’s Jubilee

Going the Extra Mile

Hawaiian Airlines Finds Many Ways to Support the Community

Through our programming, PBS Hawaii brings the world to Hawaii and Hawaii to the world. It's no surprise then that one of our strongest community partners is an organization with a similar mission – Hawaiian Airlines.

For over five years, Hawaiian Airlines has been the production title sponsor for Na Mele specials such as the upcoming concert recorded at Iolani Palace. Hawaiian Airlines' generous support allows PBS Hawaii to create exceptional programs like this once-in-a-lifetime production. Last year, Hawaiian Airlines sponsored a Na Mele that featured Hawaii's "Golden Voice," Emma Veary, in a return concert at the Halekulani. Hawaiian Airlines underwrites other PBS Hawaii programs as well, such as Nature and Masterpiece.

PBS Hawaii is just one of the ways Hawaiian Airlines supports the community, according to Ann Botticelli, senior vice president for corporate communications and public affairs.

"Giving back is part of the culture at Hawaiian Airlines," says Botticelli. Indeed, in 2011, the company gave over half a million dollars in grants to the community. "The lion's share of our giving goes to education, because we see Hawaii's children as our future work force. Many of them will grow up and work for Hawaiian Airlines – as a mechanic, as a pilot, or as the CEO. We therefore want to support those programs that give our children the best possible education."

It's one of the reasons that Hawaiian Airlines is the official airline for HIKI NŌ. "HIKI NŌ is clearly a strong educational program. It gives students the opportunity to have a voice in their community, and to get engaged in their community," she added. The airline also gives generously to cultural projects.

Hawaiian Airlines employees give back through participation in the Walk to Stop Diabetes.

"As a kamaaina company, we have a vested interest in the Hawaiian culture. What distinguishes us from our competitors is that we are from Hawaii. So we support projects that perpetuate the culture, including the annual Merrie Monarch Festival and, of course, PBS Hawaii's Na Mele."

"Hawaiian Airlines also encourages its 4,300 employees (3,800 in Hawaii) to give back and get involved," says Botticelli. "This past year, our employees, Team Kokua, raised $70,000 for the American Diabetes Association, which Hawaiian Airlines then matched with an additional $70,000."

Mahalo, Hawaiian Airlines, for your community-minded spirit! You are one of the reasons we are lucky we live Hawaii!

HIKI NŌ INSPIRES

A HIKI NŌ student was so inspired by her participation in the student news network that she's heading off to college next fall to major in broadcast journalism. Amber Thomsen from Moanalua High School was part of the HIKI NŌ media-credentialed news team that covered President Barack Obama's news conference last fall at APEC. Standing shoulder-to-shoulder with international and national network news crews proved to be a once-in-a-lifetime experience. Amber applied and was accepted for admission to the Walter Cronkite School of Journalism and Mass Communication at Arizona State University. Congratulations, Amber, and to all our high school graduates who participated in HIKI NŌ.

Na Mele: Na Lani Eha from Iolani Palace Presented by Hawaiian Airlines

Tune in on Monday, June 11 at 7:30 pm as PBS Hawaii brings you the newest Na Mele produced in high definition at the historic Iolani Palace.

This once-in-a-lifetime musical event features cherished songs of the royal monarchy composed by four siblings – King Kalaukaua, Queen Liliuokalani, Prince Leleiohoku and Princess Likelike – collectively known as Na Lani Eha.

Don't miss Marlene Sai's rendition of "Kuu Pua I Paoakalani" written by Queen Liliuokalani or the Hawaii

Youth Opera Chorus singing on the beautifully finished koa wood staircase inside the palace.

Members from the Hawaii Academy of Recording Arts will be answering the phones for this Live Pledge Special.

After June 11, this amazing performance, along with exclusive bonus performances not seen on the broadcast, will be available on DVD.

To pledge your support, please call (808) 973-2222, toll free (800) 565-5616 or go to PBSHawaii.org

You Helped Make It All Possible

PBS Hawaii would like to extend a warm mahalo to The Friends of Iolani Palace, aio, Pacific Gloves & Service, Litepanels, Camille's Lunch Wagon, Bennet Namahoe, Bryson Ramos and the Hawaii Academy of Recording Arts for helping to make this historic and moving production come to life.

Keep Your Love... And this Exclusive Keola Beamer CD

PBS Hawaii's music documentary, Keola Beamer: Mālama Ko Aloha (Keep Your Love), has inspired the slack key guitar master musician and composer to release a CD of the music performed in the program.

For a limited time, the personally autographed special edition CD Keola Beamer: Mālama Ko Aloha (Keep Your Love) will be available exclusively through PBS Hawaii with a donation of $20 or more.

PBS Hawaii will rebroadcast the music documentary on Thursday, June 14 at 9 pm. Music on the CD evokes the same richness of Hawaii's unique style with melodies that touch both the heart and soul. One of the highlights on the CD is a Hawaiian rendition of John Lennon's "Imagine," performed with Raiatea Helm.

Please consider supporting local programs like Keola Beamer: Mālama Ko Aloha (Keep Your Love) with a gift to PBS Hawaii. Your support brings the world to Hawaii and Hawaii to the world.

To receive this exclusive, personally autographed CD, please call (808) 973-2222 or toll free at (800) 565-5616. You can also pledge your support online at PBSHawaii.org

Get Carded for a Summer of Fun and Adventure!

School's out and summer is finally here, so enjoy quality time with your keiki using the PBS Hawaii Aloha Diners Club Card.* Here are five fun and educational activities you can share with your child this summer:

1. History: Did you know that the USS Bowfin was launched one year to the day of the attack at Pearl Harbor? You'll learn more facts about this fleet attack submarine at the USS Bowfin Submarine Museum & Park. Don't forget to also visit the nearby Battleship Missouri Memorial, where you can buy one, get one admission free with your PBS Hawaii Aloha Diners Club card.
2. Culture & Arts: Discover the arts with the Honolulu Theatre for Youth. This August, HTY will showcase a new take on the classic story, "The Five Chinese Brothers."
3. Zoology: Check out the newly renovated Honolulu Zoo and the pair of Hawaiian hawks that were recently added to the Hawaiian Native Habitat exhibit.
4. Geometry: Learn about angles (and patience) as you enjoy a round at Jungle River Mini Golf. This outdoor 18-hole course also offers "cosmic golf" on Fridays and Saturdays if weather permits.
5. Botany: Stroll through the rainforest at the Hawaii Nature Center Iao Valley. Children can learn about a range of ecosystems and develop a deeper appreciation of nature and our environment.

For a pledge of $65 or more, new and renewing supporters can receive this discount card and save at restaurants, vendors and attractions throughout Hawaii. *Restrictions apply.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S EMPIRE 4-Part Series

Tuesday, June 19 and 26 | 8 PM

Engines of Change Beginning with the birth of Queen Victoria, this episode explores the changes brought to Britain by the industrial revolution. By the 1840s, urban migration has created overcrowding and extremes in pollution and poverty. However, British subjects remain loyal to their queen.

Passage to India In the 1850s, one half of the world's industrial goods are made in Britain, and steamships take British exports and families to far corners of the globe. The episode also reveals the devastating effects of the Crimean War, the first major war of Victoria's reign, and the death of Prince Albert.

The Moral Crusade By 1861, Britain is the wealthiest and most powerful nation on earth. However, the death of Prince Albert weakens Victoria, and many of his political ideals fade from importance. David Livingstone's explorations of the African interior captivate the British public.

The Scramble for Africa The Suez Canal is threatened by a holy war in the Sudan, and General Charles Gordon, killed by the rebels, becomes an "imperial martyr." Cecil Rhodes prospects diamond deposits in southern Africa and asserts British control in the region. However, as Victoria celebrates her Diamond Jubilee, the empire is on the verge of its darkest hours.

8:00 THE 2012 NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC BEE

For the 24th consecutive year, fourth- to eighth-graders compete for the Bee crown and the top prize of a $25,000 college scholarship and lifetime membership in the National Geographic Society. The finalists, all winners of their state-level geographic bees, have triumphed over a field of nearly 5 million students to earn a place in the national championships.

9:00 WORLD PEACE AND OTHER 4TH GRADE ACHIEVEMENTS This film interweaves the story of a remarkable educator and the extraordinary game he developed to demonstrate the complexities of peace and global conflict. Teacher John Hunter's World Peace Game is a hands-on political simulation exercise in which students tackle real-world military, economic and environmental issues.

10:00 JOHN PORTMAN: A LIFE OF BUILDING This program examines the work and legacy of one of the world's most daring and influential architects. Over the last 45 years, John Portman's iconic urban structures and eye-popping interiors steadily rose in 60 cities across four continents, helping redefine cityscapes in the United States and skylines in Asia. Considered a maverick because he eschewed long-accepted industry standards, critics and leading architecture schools now fully embrace Portman's design approach, which emphasizes function, purpose and sensory experience.

P.O.V. Granito: How to Nail a Dictator

Thursday, June 28 | 10 PM

In a stunning milestone for justice in Central America, a Guatemalan court recently charged former dictator Efraín Ríos Montt with genocide for his brutal war against the country's Mayan people in the 1980s. Pamela Yates' 1983 documentary, When the Mountains Tremble, provided key evidence for bringing the indictment. Filmmakers Peter Kinoy, Pamela Yates and Paco de Onis present an extraordinary story of how a film, aiding a new generation of human rights activists, became a granito — a tiny grain of sand — that helped tip the scales of justice. Pictured: The Caba family in front of their home in Ixil highlands of Guatemala. The army massacred 95 people in their village in 1982 during the genocide.
