Set Designer

A Creative Vision is Set

In the middle of the studio shoot for Na Mele: Natalie Ai Kamaau and Family, set designer Richard Drake smiled with his trademark Cheshire cat grin. He had once again worked his magic in the PBS Hawaii studio, and he could now relax and enjoy the music. Starting with Na Mele: Peter Medeiros, Richard Drake has taken the PBS Hawaii studio to places previously unknown. As the set designer, his vision has created a backyard patio, complete with a vintage Volkswagen Beetle and a yellow Labrador for Na Mele: Peter Medeiros. For Na Mele: Natalie Ai Kamaau and Family, the warmth and comfort of a living room, complete with hanging ukulele and guitars, made for a safe place for the Kamaau family to share their music. And in the upcoming Na Mele: Waipuna, water plays a significant role in the studio set. In each Na Mele, the set has become a character in the stories painted by the musical artists.

Thankful for a Beloved Feathered Friend

You might think that Big Bird would make himself scarce at Thanksgiving time. After all, he could be mistaken for a holiday feast!

However, it was on a Thanksgiving Day that Big Bird was front and center in one of the most powerful programs that the groundbreaking series Sesame Street has ever produced.

The year was 1983. The broadcast aired during the first week of a new Sesame Street season – on the holiday, so that parents were home with their children to discuss the program.

Our tall feathered friend helped children to understand death and grief.

The episode was called “Farewell, Mr. Hooper.” Will Lee, the actor who played the gruff but good-hearted store owner, had died of a heart attack. Children grew to love the grumpy grocer through his many chats with Big Bird, who came in to buy birdseed milkshakes.

The question for show producers was: How do we explain Mr. Hooper’s absence? Had he gone on vacation, never to be seen or mentioned again? Had he moved away?

No. Producers said they followed their instincts to “deal with [death] head-on.” First, they researched how preschoolers react to death. Experts advised them to stay away from how Mr. Hooper died and provide their young viewers with a sense of closure about Mr. Hooper’s passing.

Head writer Norman Stiles is quoted as saying: “We decided to say that while Mr. Hooper was not here anymore, we will always have that part of him that lives within the heart, that we have our love, and that it will always stay.”

The episode ends with a tearful Big Bird saying he’s going to miss Mr. Hooper and hanging Mr. Hooper’s picture near his nest. Then he leaves to see a new baby visiting the neighborhood.

Like many children’s shows scattered over the TV universe, Sesame Street entertains. And, like other PBS children’s shows, it has always done something deeper and lasting: it teaches.

So, at Thanksgiving, we at PBS Hawaii toast a dear, not-for-eating “big bird” who has brought new dimension to young lives!

Thankfully,

Na Mele: Natalie Ai Kamauu and Family

Monday, November 24 | 7:30 pm

“I love it!” exclaimed Natalie Ai Kamauu, as she walked into the PBS Hawaii studio and saw the set for Na Mele: Natalie Ai Kamauu and Family for the first time.

The set, designed and executed by Richard Drake (see page 2), was inspired by the safe, comfortable place that Natalie, her husband Iolani Kamauu, and their daughter, Sha-Lei Kamauu, call home. The base for the set was a living room filled with warm rattan furniture that harkened back to patios and living rooms of Hawaii in the 1960s. What truly made it special for Natalie and her family were the 11 ukulele and guitars suspended above the studio floor. This collection of instruments came from the Kamauu’s home, and each one has history and meaning.

“Home is where the heart is. That is our comfortable place,” Iolani said. “This is where we create all of our music. We have a stairwell full of instruments – guitar, ukulele....When we have an idea, we’ll grab it. We’ll finger through it, and then we’ll find someone to play for and get a response...and then re-do it, and just keep going until we have something that we’re happy with.”

Natalie added, “I think it was that moment when I saw all the ukuleles hanging that I really realized how much they play. Not just ‘play’ like in music, but their energy plays in our house. They hang on our wall, not locked up. I think that if they were locked up in their cases, then the energy of our music would be quieted. But the ukuleles bring energy and life, and continued life to our music and our home.”

In Na Mele: Natalie Ai Kamauu and Family, Natalie brings a voice that fills the PBS Hawaii studio. With Iolani on guitar and vocals, and Sha-Lei, who accompanies the music with hula, Natalie performs with a passion that comes from the origins of the songs she sings, and the love she has for her family.

“When we pick songs, they have to touch our hearts,” Natalie said. “Usually it’s songs from our past, songs that we’ve heard our parents sing, or our parents dance, songs that tell about the history of our family, or the places that they come from, so even though we stand as three, what you hear and see, it goes back generations.”

Odd Squad

New PBS KIDS Show!

Premieres Wednesday, November 26, 4:00 pm, followed by weekdays at 4:30 pm

New friends are coming to our children's programming lineup – odd friends. Being odd, however, is a matter of pride for the innovative, child-run organization known as the Odd Squad. Whenever something unusual happens in town, the Odd Squad is called upon to save the day with its futuristic gadgets and masterful problem-solving agents.

Tracing the adventures of two young agents, Olive and Otto, Odd Squad is a whimsical and humorous live-action production that helps kids ages 5-8 learn and apply math concepts. Each case these agents tackle has an embedded math problem, which Olive and Otto unravel with their problem-solving and math skills. From recapturing a gallon-sized blob that has separated into smaller pieces, to dealing with a slew of unicorns, dinosaurs and wizards that have escaped from books, there is no occurrence that is too strange for the Odd Squad as they face off against various villains that wreak havoc around town.

Sean Michael Kyer (Agent Oscar), Millie Davis (Ms. O), Flip Geljo (Agent Otto) and Dalila Bela (Agent Olive).

pany, Foster's Home for Imaginary Friends, Adventure Time) and Adam Peltzman (The Electric Company, The Backyardigans), and is part of a multiplatform media experience that will include free interactive content online and on mobile. The show's interactive features will include games, parent resources, mobile apps and more. With engaging stories and interactive media, kids will be raring to sign up and join the Odd Squad!

John Rampage John Rampage got the performing bug early in life. Now, as artistic director of Diamond Head Theatre, he's responsible for everything from selecting the shows performed down to the color of a performer's shoes. Through it all, he's handing down his decades of experience and love of theater to the next generation.

PBS Hawaii Selects General Contractor
Allied Builders System for NEW HOME Construction

PBS Hawaii has selected a general contractor for the construction of our future home on Nimitz Highway and Sand Island Access Road in Honolulu.

Allied Builders System, a locally and employee-owned company, was chosen from 13 general contractors who applied for the project.

“We are so pleased to be working with a great company,” said Robbie Alm, PBS Hawaii Board Chair. “They have a proud record of outstanding work in this community and we really wanted to do this project with a company who will be a true partner in the building of our new home.”

Construction is expected to begin by year’s end, with completion in 2016. Allied will work with Atlanta-based media integration firm TI Broadcast Solutions for the project’s specialized technology aspects. Our architect for the project is Group 70 International.

With our lease in Manoa expiring, we now have more than $23 million toward our $30 million goal. If you’d like to help, please mark your check NEW HOME or go to PBSHawaii.org/newhome for more information.

Hilton Hawaiian Village

Hilton Hawaiian Village and its ocean-side restaurant, Bali Steak & Seafood, are the newest local supporters of Masterpiece, including the highly anticipated fifth season of Downton Abbey.

Hilton Hawaiian Village*

“We feel that PBS Hawaii is the perfect fit to our organization’s focus on serving the community that we live and work in,” said Lora Gallagher, Regional Director of Marketing. “Our customers are PBS Hawaii viewers.”

Like many supporters, Lora’s personal affinity for Hawaii’s only public television station started with Big Bird and Mister Rogers’ Neighborhood.

“My parents enjoy PBS programming and have been financial supporters ever since I was a child,” Lora said. “We often call each other to mention that certain specials are coming on, and my 15-year-old daughter is reading a book about the Roosevelts and wants to watch our DVD of the PBS special.

“I’m glad PBS Hawaii has been a part of my family throughout the years and I know that my daughter will continue to love learning and enjoy PBS Hawaii,” Lora said.

From the Editor

In our October issue, a caption incorrectly identified the facility featured on the cover. The host of How We Got to Now, Steven Johnson, was standing in front of the Gemini North Observatory on Mauna Kea. Mahalo to Sandy Leggett of the Gemini Observatory for calling this to our attention.
