A YEAR OF CHANGE, CHALLENGE, AND COMMUNITY

DECEMBER 2008
Onetime Kalihi kid Norman Nakanishi, now a pastor, remembers how his parents would pad the children’s few Christmas gifts by holiday-wrapping new underwear and socks. The undies and socks were must-haves, not fun treats, but they helped create a look of plenty under the tree.

Little Norman knew the drill and wasn’t fooled.

But when he calls up memories of his childhood, it’s not scarcity or deprivation that come to mind.

He recalls an abundance of aloha, sharing, and pulling together with family and friends.

I have similar feelings as a leader of this private nonprofit organization, looking back at a year beset with the effects of the nation’s financial meltdown.

A tough year, with one or two other tight years expected to follow.

What I’ll remember most about this year is the PBS Hawaii supporters who called or wrote to say, “I’m having a hard time right now so my donation is smaller. I’ll give more when I can.” I treasure the spirit of a woman who emailed, “My investments aren’t doing well, but in general I’m in pretty good shape. I’m giving you much more this year, because I know others can’t.”

Indeed, viewer contributions are down. But we believe our work is more important than ever, especially at a time that Hawaii education has taken severe funding hits.

With your help, PBS Hawaii delights in being a bright spot in education and lifelong learning. This year, we ADDED two new highly regarded children’s series—Sid the Science Kid and Martha Speaks. We also ADDED a new primetime local series featuring the work of independent filmmakers, PBS Hawaii Presents.

We are not a state agency and we’re not commercially driven. Your contributions are a vital breath of life, bringing fresh air to the airwaves.

In the New Year, count on us to be good fiscal stewards, and to continue to serve as a haven for children…a stage for beauty, culture and the arts…and a forum for respectful discussion.

Mahalo for providing us with the kind of experience that Norman Nakanishi’s Kalihi neighborhood gave him—an abundance of aloha, sharing, and pulling together.

Mahalo,

“I love learning, and there’s always something new to learn from every episode of NOVA. I’ve also always been fascinated by anything science. Nowadays, I am a filmmaker, but even when I wasn’t, I could appreciate the show’s high production value. From the gorgeous cinematography to the way every episode is written, NOVA is a well put together program, making it easy to watch.”

“I don’t really have a favorite show but I do really enjoy watching the specials that air. You see things on PBS that you don’t see on any other channels and I like that. I like feeling like I’m being informed.”

“I wish I could say that I watch something more my age, but in reality my favorite show is Sesame Street. I used to watch it a lot when I was a kid. Every now and then I’ll sit down in the morning and watch it with my brother. It had good messages when I was a kid and it has good messages now.”

“My favorite show is the one Leslie Wilcox does on Tuesdays-Long Story Short. It really is a wonderful program full of great conversations with interesting islanders. Leslie always does a fabulous job. I watch to learn from her!”

TECHNOLOGY FIRSTS
Early in 2008, PBS Hawaii partnered with Sony to become the first TV station in Hawaii with a weekly program—Long Story Short—shot, edited and broadcast in HD technology. Other PBS Hawaii programs produced with vivid, razor-sharp HD resolution include Artist and the upcoming Na Mele: Traditions in Hawaii Song shot on location at Halekulani’s House Without A Key.

Although already transmitting a digital signal on the island of Oahu, as the year ends, PBS Hawaii prepares to become one of the first public television stations in the country to fully transition from analog to digital broadcast transmission. The statewide rollout begins on January 15th 2009.

LOCAL FILMMAKERS GET A NEW HOME...
Beautiful Son, Finding Sandalwood Mountain, Fishbowl, Heart Strings, Papakolea—were among the local productions showcased in the new Thursday 8:30PM time period—where PBS Hawaii Presents is now home for the work of local filmmakers.

A PBS national audience was treated to a rare documentary experience when Independent Lens presented the broadcast premiere of Na Kamalei: The Men of Hula.

Next up—the story of a Hawaii political icon’s journey and legacy—Patsy Mink: Ahead of the Majority. PBS Hawaii has already begun work in presenting this important film to a national audience.
OUT IN THE COMMUNITY

The unprecedented PBS documentary CARRIER drew great interest from Hawaii’s military and civilian communities, and it showed in the participation at two major PBS Hawaii advance screenings held at the Arizona Memorial Theatre and our PBS Hawaii studio.

Sesame Street characters and hundreds of children and parents took over Blaisdell Concert Hall in June when PBS Hawaii sponsored Sesame Street Live.

PBS celebrity chef extraordinaire, Martin Yan, and the Servco Home Appliance Showroom teamed up to host a special event celebrating delicious food delivered with Yan’s own brand of humor.

E Ola Pono, a PBS Hawaii production, highlights artwork and video submitted in the statewide student competition focused on what it means to live “pono”. The PBS Hawaii production also featured Keaukaha Elementary School from Hawaii island and Waimanalo’s Blanche Pope Elementary School on Oahu where the teachings of “pono” have taken on a major role in school culture.

During the past year PBS Hawaii conducted 55 Ready-To-Learn workshops in schools, libraries and community centers statewide. R-T-L integrates TV programs and online resources with community outreach to help parents and educators.

UNMATCHED COVERAGE OF THE PRESIDENTIAL RACE

The award-winning producers, journalists and filmmakers from The NewsHour, FRONTLINE and American Experience brought relevance, balance and in-depth storytelling to this year’s election coverage. PBS Hawaii live coverage included all four debates, election night results and analysis, and gavel-to-gavel coverage of both national conventions.

A Year of Change, Challenge & Community
JANUARY 15 - HAWAII GOES DIGITAL
Will it impact you?

If you subscribe to cable or satellite services, and none of the television sets in your home is hooked up to an indoor and/or outdoor antenna – the answer is “no”. Nothing will change for you come January 15th.

If you receive PBS Hawaii and other stations by using an indoor and/or outdoor antenna, this digital transition will impact you. How? When? Good questions with different answers, depending on where you live.

If you have an analog television set, you will need to purchase a digital converter box with analog pass through, and you may also need to purchase a new antenna, as well as redirect it.

The transition from our analog to new digital transmitters is more than a technology change. PBS Hawaii and some of the other full-power stations have changed the location of their transmitters due to environmental concerns and land leases. New transmitter locations put another wrinkle in this digital transition process.

OAHU
PBS Hawaii’s analog transmitter is located on Kapiolani Blvd. in Honolulu, and the new digital transmitter is at Palehua, north of Makakilo. After January 15th some residents of Oahu who receive our signal via an indoor and/or outdoor antenna, may have to adjust their antenna, pointing it more towards the Waianae mountain range. Some residents along the Leeward Coast who could not receive our signal from the former transmitter location, may now be able to tune in a new vivid digital picture.

Our new Palehua site brings improved altitude, placing our PBS Hawaii digital transmitter 2,000 feet higher than the former analog location. Coverage testing on Oahu is in progress. This will enable us to pinpoint our new coverage footprint on Oahu, including pockets where our signal may be improved or more difficult to receive. Remember, you may have to redirect your antenna to point more towards the Waianae mountain range in order to receive our digital signal on Oahu after 12 Noon January 15th.
MAUI COUNTY
PBS Hawaii and other stations were informed we had to leave our Haleakala transmitter sites (10,400 feet above sea level). The new PBS Hawaii digital transmitter is located at Ulupalakua Ranch (4,600 feet above sea level). Altitude reduction could affect pockets of coverage on Maui island. Viewers who previously received our signal from the Maui transmitter may have more difficulty with this new line of sight. People on Oahu’s windward coast, as well as the north-eastern coast (Hamakua) of Hawaii island will lose the PBS Hawaii signal transmitted from Maui. Molokai and Lanai residents may have to adjust the direction of their antennas depending on whether they pick up our PBS Hawaii Oahu or Maui transmitter signal.

HAWAII
Although the FCC mandate for meeting digital transmission requirements applies only to a station’s high power transmitter signal, PBS Hawaii will offer an upgraded digital signal via translators serving the Hilo area by the end of February 2009.

KAUAI
PBS Hawaii is ready to replace our analog translators with a completely digital system. The transition date is not set at this time, but we will announce that conversion with plenty of notice for our PBS Hawaii viewers on Kauai. With the new location and increased altitude of our Oahu transmitter site, we expect our broadcast signal transmitted from Oahu to reach the Lihue area of Kauai after January 15th. Viewers will need to adjust the direction of their antennas, and of course, have a pass-through converter box if they are using an analog television set.

No matter when the digital transition comes to your area, if you have an analog TV, you will need a digital converter box with analog pass through and you will need an antenna capable of picking up UHF and VHF transmissions. Please visit our website for all the information you need: www.pbshawaii.org.

After January 15th, PBS Hawaii viewers will be watching one of the first public television stations in the country broadcasting a digital only signal from its high-power transmitters. We will continue to keep you informed through the PBS Hawaii Magazine, our website, and on-air messages. Please contact us with any questions – we always appreciate hearing from you.

Martha Jane Friedrich knows the power of giving.

“Choose a gift that lasts”

“I think it’s important to give to the generations that come after me. And that’s why a gift to public television and my community is so important.”

Martha Jane included PBS Hawaii in her will. Consider joining the community of people who want public television to span generations.
Give Aloha Update

Throughout the month of September, Foodland Super Markets asked its customers to contribute to their favorite nonprofit organizations.

Mahalo to our loyal supporters for pulling together and extending the power of your gift through Give Aloha, Foodland’s annual community matching gift program.

This year, we feel very fortunate to let you know that you helped to raise a total of $9,044.76 for public television.

Your generosity will help to enrich the lives of everyone, from keiki to kupuna throughout our island communities.
